

I've always searched for and taken on new challenges. I've worked in hospitality primarily and have risen to the top running my own bar in Edinburgh: Usher's. I've also worked in finance in the new business team at Yorkshire Bank where I aided a new system saving them lots of time in their working process. I ran my own business called Souped Up, where I wholesaled soup to cafes around Edinburgh. This business also used to have an outlet out of an old police box which I ran. I have recently had medical problems, brain inflammation, which put me out of action for a while. My business fell apart and I have moved back to Surrey to be closer to my parents. I am currently searching out new challenges to undertake. I am determined and ready to take the next step in my life and believe the course at Founders & Coders is perfect for me. I'm hoping to find some like minded coders to take up a project and secure my future.
